Define the Persuasion Approach

As far as Aristotle's viewpoint is concerned, basically, there are three elements in written communication that aim to influence the audience such as logos, pathos, and ethos. Ethos focuses on ethics and is significantly used to persuade the reader of the credibility of an author. This mode would be used by the essay writer to justify his standpoint and reveal the level of his morality and reliability. Logos is concerned with logic and intends to persuade the reader with an aid of facts and logical reasoning. Pathos aims to please emotional sentiments as well as induce a demonstrative reaction in the reader. You need to learn and follow some useful and amazing tactics for incorporating humor in your thoughts that will help you to attain exactly what you want. Here is the direction to your way!

Remember!

Narrate some motivating experience, not just info.

Use dashes or Ellipsis

Make sure to use an aside method by adding some dashes i.e. (- -) or ellipsis-like (...) rather than parentheses. This approach helps to poke fun in the text in terms of exaggeration, asking a rhetorical question, incorporating a tongue-in-cheek remark, or even making a hilarious statement. Essays are not the most popular type of writing project assigned by teachers and professors, many students are unfamiliar with the concept. Sometimes, the aside could be used to enhance the sound effect such as the sound of "ahem". By constructing the sense of the aside a bit surprising, you could add a slight cheerfulness to the writing. Using the aside seems like sharing an underground secret, it could also support and boost an association with your readers.

Enhance the sound Pattern

Another way to comfort your audience is to use the alliteration method that takes a chain of words starting with an identical sound. You are not supposed to begin the words with a similar letter rather they should have a similar sound. Remember, more than one tone could be used in the essay to persuade the reader. But, at the time of demonstrating your analysis, it is highly required to point out which tone of persuasion has been used by the author and explain the logic behind it to determine the effectiveness of the writer.

Vigorously read numerous times

Actively giving a frequent read to text is the crucial step to writing a rhetorical essay. This involves all the thorough research you need to carry out and the answers to them. The most substantial tactic to read is to move according to the paragraph. Keep the list of questions by your side and then answer them accordingly. Never ever depend upon one or two readings so, it's good to give multiple readings to do an effective analysis. Don't forget, you give a read to different essays to analyze and assess which indicates digging deep, creating notes, emphasizing the writing techniques of an author, and making notes of patterns.
